Teaming Up with Your Local Building Officials

Are you ever confused about the duties and powers of building officials and how they affect you and your business? Do you wonder what methodology building officials use and how to communicate better with your local building official? If so, you won't want to miss this Annual Workshop with Roger Axel, a building official with over 20 years of experience and Executive Officer of the Association of Minnesota Building Officials (AMBO), and Rick Parrino, General Manager of Plum Building Systems in Waukegan, IA. Roger will provide a valuable building official point of view and Rick has a long history of networking and working with his local building officials.

This presentation will set the stage for helping you form positive relationships and strategies for working with building officials in your community. This workshop will:

- Review legal definitions important to the building code process;
- Discuss duties and powers of building officials as it relates to our industry;
- Review the implementation of alternative building methods and materials;
- Provide an overview of engineering concepts applicable to the components industry; and,
- Explore ways of using the code to benefit your business and increase sales.

Bring your questions, comments and contributions. Together, we will keep BCMC alive throughout the year and continue Building Community and Making Connections.
